President's Report by Dr Brian Reid

Welcome to 2012 and another year of interesting lectures, field trips and activities.

This year our activities will differ slightly from the usual as we have two main anniversaries that the Society will be focusing its activities on:

- the 70th Anniversary of the bombing of Darwin and;
- the 150th anniversary of John McDouall Stuart and his party crossing the continent from south to north (Pt Stuart).

Our lectures for the year will be on Territory events surrounding the Second World War and our first speaker for the year will be our Patron, Austin Asche. To acknowledge the impact that War had on Darwin and its citizens, Janet Dickinson's book, Refugees in our own Country: The Story of Darwin's Wartime Evacuees has been republished and will be launched on 19th February.

July 24th marks the day that Stuart and his party arrived at what is now Point Stuart, and the Society has organised a range of activities during that week. The Federation of Australian Historical Societies, which represents the interests of 1000 historical societies throughout Australia, will also be holding its AGM in Darwin on 23 July to coincide with the events. Our usual field trip will instead, be a day trip to Pt Stuart to honour the achievements of Stuart and his party.

Refugees in our own Country: The Story of Darwin's Wartime Evacuees* – Book Launch – Sunday 19 February 2012

Due to popular demand and to coincide with the 70th anniversary of the bombing of Darwin, Janet Dickinson's book has been republished and will be launched on Sunday 19th February at 1.00pm in the NT Library.

The following was Janet's inspiration to write the book –

I always knew that the evacuation from Darwin in December 1941 on board the troop ship Zealandia with three children was a horrific time for my mother, Gladys Litchfield. While thinking of a subject for my tutorial in Northern Territory History at the NT University, I decided to take on the evacuation of women and children from Darwin during WWII. My mother's memories of the event were still very raw and my interview with her was teary. To verify some of the data, I also interviewed another Zealandia evacuee whose story corroborated my mother's.

During the planning of Battle of Australia year in 1991, I asked the organising committee if something could be held for the women and children who had been evacuated. The answer was yes, but I was told that I had to do it and that I should also apply for a grant. I did apply and was given one. I advertised the event in newspapers throughout Australia and the response was overwhelming. With this huge interest, I received many letters telling stories of personal experiences. The result was the Evacuee Reunion that was held at the old Darwin Hotel on 12 December 1992.

Several years later, I received a NT History Grant to interview evacuees. The interviews were heart wrenching and there were many tears during the interviews. In many cases, the women and their children were collected at very little notice and no care was taken to where they were sent. The conditions on many of the ships were overcrowded and carelessly catered for. It was a long and arduous journey with a lot of port stops along the way. Those who didn't have family to go to were billeted with strangers or had to support themselves.

Armed with all this information, and needing to publish these harrowing stories the Historical Society of the NT first published Refugees in our Own Country in 1995. This title was chosen because those women and children were forgotten once they left Darwin. Administrator Abbott sent word to the receiving city that those people were self sufficient and their husbands were all working for the cause. This of course was true in most cases, but for women whose husbands were killed in the first or subsequent bombings, there was no follow up to see how they were coping.

This book has been a release for me from transferred memories and understandings of what my mother experienced. I know that the people I interviewed appreciated the fact that someone was interested enough to listen and record their memories of that traumatic time - and then write about it. This was very special to them.

Janet's book will be launched very fittingly by Wendy James (nee Secrett), who at the age of six was evacuated to Perth on the MV Koolinda with her mother, brother and baby sister.

Sunday Christmas Brunch – 27 November

Twenty- seven people turned up for brunch. It was a very enjoyable morning and a welcome opportunity to catch up with some of our members that we don't see very often.

Wendy and Earl James had exceeded our expectations with their homemade delights. We were treated to a variety of quiches, egg, mushroom and meat dishes. Lyn Reid, as promised, brought along her champion mince pies topped with deadly brandy butter.

Champagne and orange topped brunch off nicely.

The Daring Mission of Shady Lady – August 1943

On 13 August 1943, pilot, First Lieutenant Doug Craig and his crew on the Shady Lady, a B-24 Liberator Bomber, were to fly further than the plane's design capabilities. The 2700 nautical mile mission took off from Darwin to complete a marathon 16 hour raid into Borneo. On its return journey to Australia, it was forced to land on Anjo Peninsula which is halfway between Darwin and Broome. The successful mission had survived tropical thunderstorms, Japanese anti aircraft artillery and set a new record for a bomber. The crew were rescued by local Aborigines and Benedictine monks. Sixty-eight years later, Clement Maraltadj, the grandson of Paul Maraltadj who helped rescue the crew, and Alice Craig, widow of First Lieutenant Craig, met on the salt-flat at Anjo Peninsula to unveil a plaque and to mark the anniversary.
